

OTTERBEIN COLLEGE MBA PROGRAM ANNOUNCES NEW DIRECTOR

Chairman of the Otterbein Business, Accounting, and Economics Department Don Eskew has recently been named as the Director of the college's MBA program. He will also continue to serve as Department Chair. Eskew has been a professor at Otterbein since 1993 and was instrumental in creating the program in 1997.

"I am excited that Dr. Eskew is willing to take on this role. By bringing the leadership of the MBA program back into the Business Department, we are likely to see positive outcomes. Don has already begun to talk with faculty, current students, and alumni and identified new opportunities for innovation and expansion," said Niki Fayne, Dean, School of Professional Studies.

The Otterbein MBA's selective admission process and small classes help create a setting for networking, discussion and debate among talented students and faculty. Graduates report gaining insights into their leadership and management styles, as well as learning business solutions that immediately benefit their organizations.

Otterbein recently added programs to better meet the needs of adult students working in a rapidly evolving business world. After surveying student and business needs, and studying the content and design of cutting edge MBA programs across the country, Otterbein's MBA has streamlined the curriculum to offer more choices and less time in the classroom for students wanting to earn a quality business education. MBA students also choose to enhance their rigorous core curriculum with a variety of elective courses that include study of special topics in Actuarial Science, Management, Finance, Economics, and Accounting. In addition a new 4+1 sequence has been introduced for Otterbein undergraduates. Please visit www.otterbein.edu/mba/4_1_program.asp for details.
